Scaling Opportunity: Decoding the Complex Ecosystem of Climate and Infrastructure

TBD

Mike Clancy

Partner - FMI Consulting

Lara Skinner, Ph.D

Executive Director - The Worker Institute at Cornell, Director - Labor Leading on Climate Initiative

Mike Fishman

President and Executive Director of the Climate Jobs National Resource Center

Fostering key relationships through advocacy, education, and training will play a critical role in appropriating monies toward projects serviced by IUPAT partners and in capturing emerging markets in many new green infrastructure sectors. Due to significant federal government investment, core segments for union labor (the so-called MUSH segments of municipal, universities, schools, and hospitals) are likely to be the major growth areas. Again, understanding the scale, timing, and location of this growth is core to allowing the IUPAT to focus its apprentice development and organizing efforts for maximum market share gain.
