As we emerge from a global state of prohibition, the need for harmonized international standards that assure the quality and safety of cannabis becomes even more urgent. The lack of standards has led to unreliable testing data and a consumer base that is left responsible for ensuring the products they are purchasing are safe. ASTM International's Technical Committee D37 on Cannabis has been hard at work creating market relevant standards for the global cannabis industry to address these quality and safety issues.

It is also important to:

- Increase participation in the standards development effort from international stakeholders,
- Support the needs of diverse professionals that interface with cannabis standardization and safety harmonization
- Explore the unique needs of the member regions, and
- Update the global community on the latest technological innovations that will aid in compliance, setting standards, and consumer/patient protection.
