Are you a student entering 7th-11th* grade in the Fall who is interested in the environment and ready to explore, in depth, your passion for Vermont's natural resources?

If you answered yes to this question, then you should attend NRMA. Come ready to explore natural resources management, and share a weekend with other youth from around Vermont who have the same interests.

NRMA has been developed for individuals just like you! It is a weekend full of fantastic learning opportunities aimed at understanding Vermont's forests, wildlife, soils, water ecosystems and more! All programs will be hands-on and mostly outdoors.

You will have the opportunity to take in-depth, hands-on workshops with experts. Each workshop will allow for extensive in-the-field exploration of the subject matter.

2024 Tentative Workshops

- The Lake is Alive: Biogeochemistry of Buck Lake
- Food Waste, Climate Change, and the Role of Microorganisms
- Fish Health CSI
- How to Plan & Zone for the Results You Want
- Using Camera Traps for Science and Storytelling

In addition to these workshops, participants will have opportunities to hike, fish, canoe and swim during the weekend.

Space is limited to 30 participants — sign up now!
