Then on April 18, Alfred was in Pittsburgh on business when he noticed a crowd buzzing around a bulletin board for one of the Pittsburgh dailies.

Elbowing his way through the swarm, he managed to catch a glimpse of the headline.

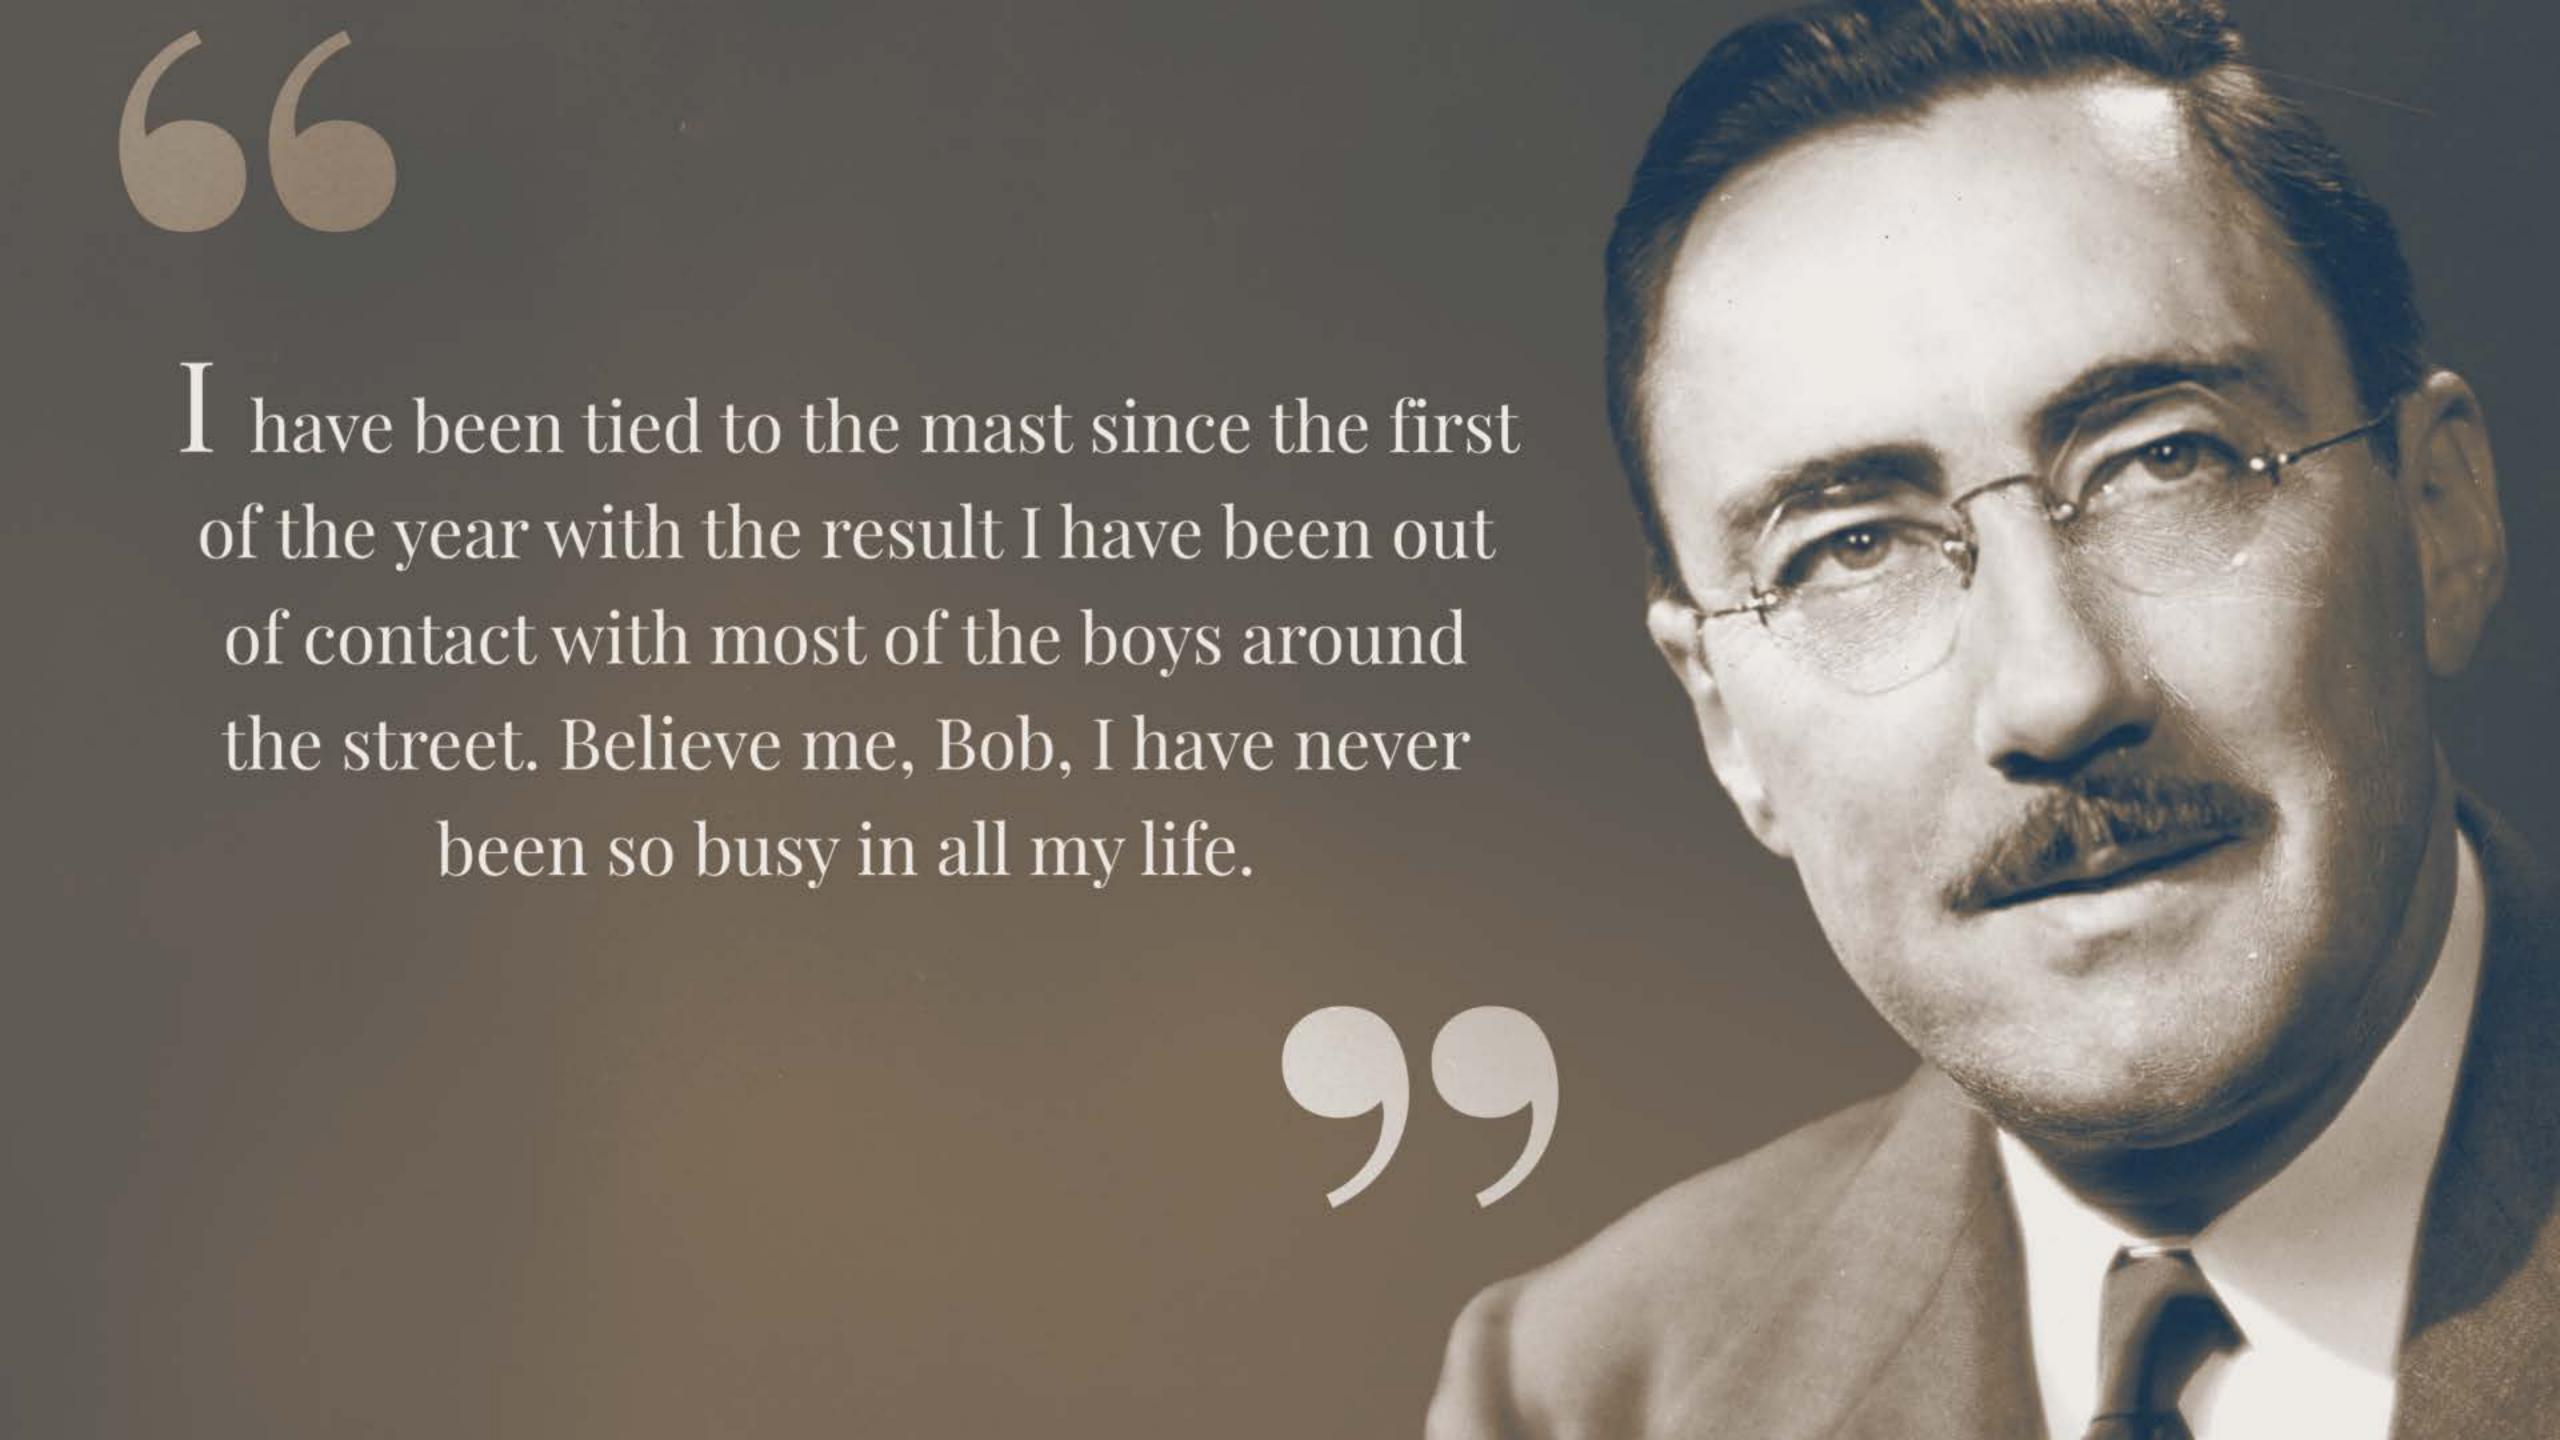

"There I read that San Francisco had experienced a severe earthquake, and that a great conflagration had resulted and was making speedy headway," Alfred recalled. "I knew at once what this catastrophe meant. I got back to New York as fast as I could and began intensive study of the probable effect of the conflagration upon a very large number of insurance companies which were operating in San Francisco."

"Days, nights and Sundays" were consumed in the aftermath of the earthquake and fire as Alfred sifted through the data that came in from the disaster zone, searching for clues. Alfred's brother, Charles Sumner, provided some of the information firsthand. He had been visiting relatives in the Washington DC area when word of the earthquake hit. Alfred immediately sent Sumner to the west coast to find out whatever he could about the impact of the disaster on the fire insurance companies and their policyholders. The incisive report on the Great San Francisco earthquake and fire ignited both national recognition and sales for the Alfred M. Best Company.
